“ There are some people you meet that touch you in some way ,that person was Harry. It didn't take much to make him happy ,just a simple cup of coffee and a little conversation He loved to talk about his cows and his farm life , The last time I saw Harry was at the diner He had his pancake and his coffee. I told him to have a good week and I would see him next week But his time here is over. The diner won't be the same without him , There is a emptiness without him. Harry was always happy , He had little but gave so much. I will miss you Harry. I already do. May you be with God in Heaven ❤️❤️

“ Harry was someone I will never forget. It's hard to forget someone with a purely sweet nature, and an innocence that is refreshing. Talking about his tending to the cows excited him. Sharing his framed photo of hay bales decorated for Christmas, made him proud. His thoughtfulness in giving everyone at our place of business miniature roses for Easter was his true nature. I'm so thankful to have met Harry and experienced his soul. One could only hope to be that kind of person. Btw... the roses are growing phenomenally, but I'm sure you see that now.....
